Stellenbosch

Stellenbosch is internationally renowned for its beautiful environment, wine farms, street cafés, restaurants, quality wines, historical buildings and its famous university.

Stellenbosch owes its existence and name to the former governor of the Cape, Simon van der Stel, who established this settlement on the banks of the Eerste River in 1679, making it the second-oldest formal settlement in South Africa.

The town is centred around the university, which is primarily an Afrikaans-language institution and one of the leading universities in the country, renowned for its law and engineering faculties. It also offers courses in viticulture, the primary agricultural industry in the area, as it lies in the heart of the Cape winelands.

Many leading wine estates are found here and are home to some of the best restaurants in the country. Look out for Rust en Vrede, Jordan and Terroir, all of which have made it on to the Eat Out award list for the top 10 restaurants in the country.

Introduction

The University of South Africa (UNISA) will be hosting its first hybrid international conference on technical and vocational education and training (ICTVET2024), during 25 – 27 September 2024 at the Protea Hotel, Marriott Stellenbosch Conference Centre, Western Cape Province, South Africa. The conference will be organized in close partnership with the South African Public Colleges Organization (SAPCO – organization that represents 50 public TVET colleges in South Africa), supported by the Education Training and Development Practices Sector Education and Training Authority (ETDP SETA), the Department of Higher Education and Training (DHET) and the UNESCO-UNEVOC International Centre for Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET). The theme of the conference is: Advancing TVET for Digitalized World, Youth Skilling, Employability and Sustainable Development (National, Regional, and International)”.

Global disruptions such as climate change, digitalization, the Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR), demographic change, and migration are changing the way we live, work, and learn. New technologies are emerging, remote forms of working and learning are becoming commonplace, and workers need new skills such as problem-solving, ICT, entrepreneurship, and STEM, while continuing to require traditional skills and knowledge.

TVET systems must therefore rise to the challenge of supporting learners to prepare them for the workplace of the future. Improving the future-readiness of TVET systems is crucial for assuring their relevance and, ultimately, their survival. To prepare learners for future competencies and industry requirements, TVET teaching staff /trainers must possess these essential competencies and qualities themselves. Therefore, this hybrid conference sought to collect input from the wider technical and vocational and training (TVET) community on how TVET systems can be better organized to deliver the skills demanded in a rapidly changing and increasingly complex labour market. However, many countries have made tremendous strides in several areas to shape the future of TVET systems.

Specific sub-themes for delegates might want to consider include, but are not, limited to the following:

- TVET promise
- Inclusive TVET
- TVET for digitalized world
- TVET network
- TVET for climate action
- Energy Security and Transition
- Private sector engagement
- TVET research and knowledge base
- Articulation
- Quality Assurance
- Innovation, and sustainable leadership
- Sustainable curriculum in TVET
